Teaching the Next Generation

The psalmist wrote, "Now also when i am old and gray-headed, O God, do not forsake me until I declare Your strength to this generation, Your power to everyone who is to come" (Psalm 71:18). We quickly note the concern that the inspired writer had for the generations that would follow him. He wanted to show God's strength and power to "this generation" and "everyone who is to come."

Our attitude should be the same. It was not so many years ago that I was young, and the older generation was there to teach me the strength, power, and ways of God. I will always be indebted to that "older generation" for doing so.

May we never forget that God's truth must be taught and re-taught to each generation. The aged apostle Peter wrote to the young and old alike: "I will not be negligent to remind you always of these things, though you know and are established in the present truth. Yes, I think it is right, as long as I am in this tent, to stir you up by reminding you, knowing that shortly I must put off my tent, just as our Lord Jesus Christ showed me" (2 Peter 1:12-14). In this passage, Peter strongly emphasized the need to remind people of divine truth, even though they may already know these things.

I belong to a generation that has witnessed a change in direction within the church. Beginning several decades ago, attitudes started to change. Less emphasis was given to what the Bible calls "first principles" (Hebrews 5:12). The Hebrews writer lamented that such first principles had to be taught over and over again to some in the church who should have been teachers themselves. This shows that we must teach more than just first principles, especially to those who know and honor such simple truths. But if first principles are not being followed and respected, it becomes necessary to teach and re-teach them.

We will always owe the next generation the knowledge of fundamental divine truths. Failure to teach them today will bring nothing but trouble tomorrow. --Milton Smith (Tulsa, OK) via Old Paths
