Count To Ten?

Few things bring us more regret than words we have spoken. Especially when a situation is heated by emotion, we tend to speak harshly rather than letting our speech be "with grace, seasoned with salt" (Colossians 4:6).

I remember a piece of advice: "Count to ten" before saying anything. Even ten might be insufficient, but the principle of thinking before speaking finds much support in Scripture.

"Do you see a man hasty in his words? There is more hope for a fool than for him" (Proverbs 29:20). That applies, by the way, to additional settings besides anger. Simple off-the-cuff remarks can devastate someone's feelings even though you didn't intend it.

But angry words are the culprit more often than not. An excellent song admonishes us: "Angry words, Oh, let them never from the tongue unbridled slip." The writer obviously referred to James 1:26 where the Lord's brother wrote, "If anyone among you thinks he is religious and does not bridle his tongue, but deceives his own heart, this one's religion is useless."

Just as a bridle controls a horse, we must control our tongue (i.e. our words). Hear again the wise King Solomon: "A fool vents all his feelings, but a wise man holds them back" (Proverbs 29:11). Someone protests, "I was just speaking my mind!" Perhaps so, but might it not have been better if you had thought it through first?

"In a multitude of words sin is not lacking, but he who restrains his lips is wise" (Proverbs 10:19). – Joe Slater

Worship service will be live streamed live every Sunday morning at 10:30 on <https://www.facebook.com/Columbianachurchofchrist/> and on the website www.columbianachurchofchrist.org.
